mirandasnotebook #presstrip | Having one of those 'pinch me' moments as I wake up to this spectacular view in Burgundy! We're staying at the incredible hotel @abbaye_de_la_bussiere, and my bedroom window looks out at this charming scene, complete with a 16th Century dovecote and a statue by Paul Day (who did the famous 'The Meeting' at King's Cross St Pancras and is a good friend of the hotel owners). I can't wait for a day of exploring ahead! Do have a look at my stories to follow along all the adventures.

mirandasnotebook #presstrip | We were driven in this beauty (named the Frog 🐸) to Beaune and all around the spectacularly lovely Burgundian countryside by Julie, who works for the @abbaye_de_la_bussiere, today. Julie showed us the best spots for panorama views of the vineyards, which are every shade of gold and auburn and rust at the moment, and was an incredible source of knowledge about the local area. I have fallen in love with this very special part of France!

Beaune, Bourgogne, France

mirandasnotebook Thanks so much to Liz (@the.fernweh.files) for suggesting I go to @thecooksatelier in Beaune. It's the most beautiful cooking school and shop, and it's now my ambition to return to Beaune one day and do a cooking class here (they teach them on Wednesdays and Saturdays). I've put some pictures of the shop's beautiful interior in my stories!

Burgundy, France

mirandasnotebook What a wonderful time of year to visit Burgundy, when the vineyards look like fields of gold. I'll never forget this special trip! ✨❤️✨ mirandasnotebook 'In October any wonderful unexpected thing might be possible.' — Elizabeth George Speare *

My thoughts exactly! There is something magical about this beautiful month, my favourite of the year. I'm back in London and sorting through the thousands of photos I took in Geneva and Burgundy (I can never be minimalist when it comes to photos!). After that, I'm keen to seek out my favourite autumnal haunts in London: @bageriet_london for the best hot chocolate, Hampstead Heath for long walks, @heywood_hill for browsing the latest book releases and Highgate Cemetery for Gothic spookiness.

mirandasnotebook Now this is what I call living my best life! Unless...do you think I need one more pillow?! 😊

Happy weekend everyone! The reality is I'm waking up not in the bed of my dreams at the @abbaye_de_la_bussiere, but in my much smaller one without a touch of velvet in sight. It looks like a beautiful day, though, and I'm looking forward to a trip to the local farmer's market before getting on with some work. Enjoy your Saturday, friends!
